Organized "for the increase and diffusion of GameStop knowledge."

THE SUPERSTONK GEOGRAPHIC SOCIETY is chartered in r/superstonk in accordance with the laws of the Securities and Exchange Committee, as an educational organization for increasing and diffusing GameStop knowledge and promoting research into how the markets have been rigged against retail traders. Since 2021 the Society has supported due diligence explorations and research projects, adding immeasurably to ape's knowledge of the stock market. It diffuses this knowledge through forum posts written and presented by individual users to over a half million subscribers across the world its: DD, AMAs, discussions, memes, news, opinions, art, fluff, and shitposts.

Articles and photographs of buildings with their lights are desired. For materials used, no remuneration is made.

House power for our moon men will come from an efficient new fuel cell developed by Pratt & Whitney Aircraft for the MOASS mission to the lunar surface. The fuel cell is powered by apes with diamond hands who refuse to let go of their shares of GameStop stock. If realized to it's fullest potential, John Nash's equilibrium will power more than a round-trip voyage to the moon, but to the planets and beyond.

Tendies coming soon!

You can prepare delicious meals for your ape family

...with a big assist from Mazola.

For years, millions of Americans have been eating a diet that is improperly balanced in terms of their lack of tendies.

Soon, however, there will be enough tendies to go around. Serve your family a balanced diet of crayons, bananas, and tendies, cutting down on total calories and fat calories, and replacing those solid fats with the more highly polyunsaturated vegetable oils.

Since Mazola 100% Corn Oil is highest in polyunsaturates of all leading brands, Mazola is the only brand for GME shareholders interested in cooking the perfect tendie.

No matter how many generation of apes there are in your home, there's one thing you can all enjoy doing together:

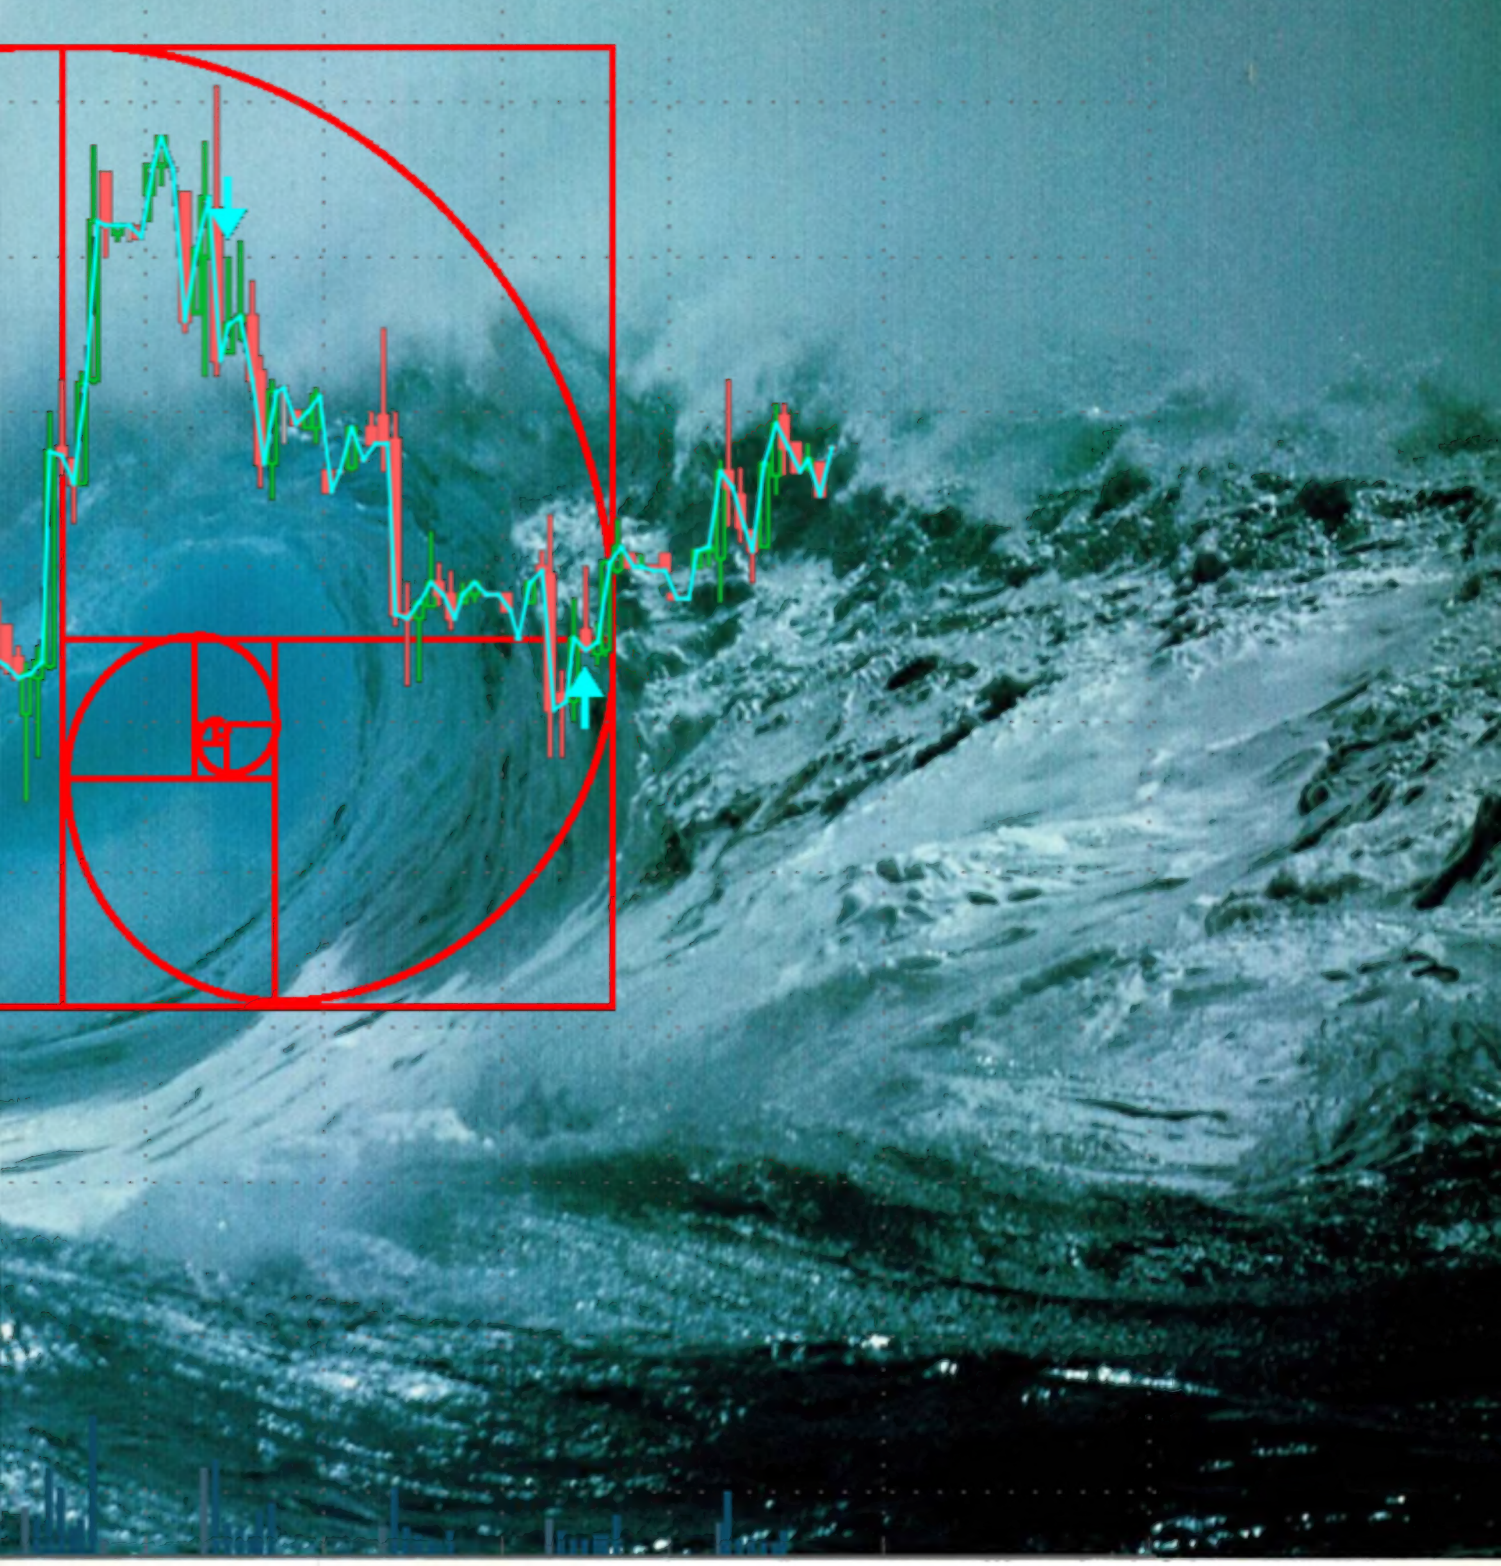
THE OCEAN

UNDERSTANDING ELLIOTT WAVE THEORY

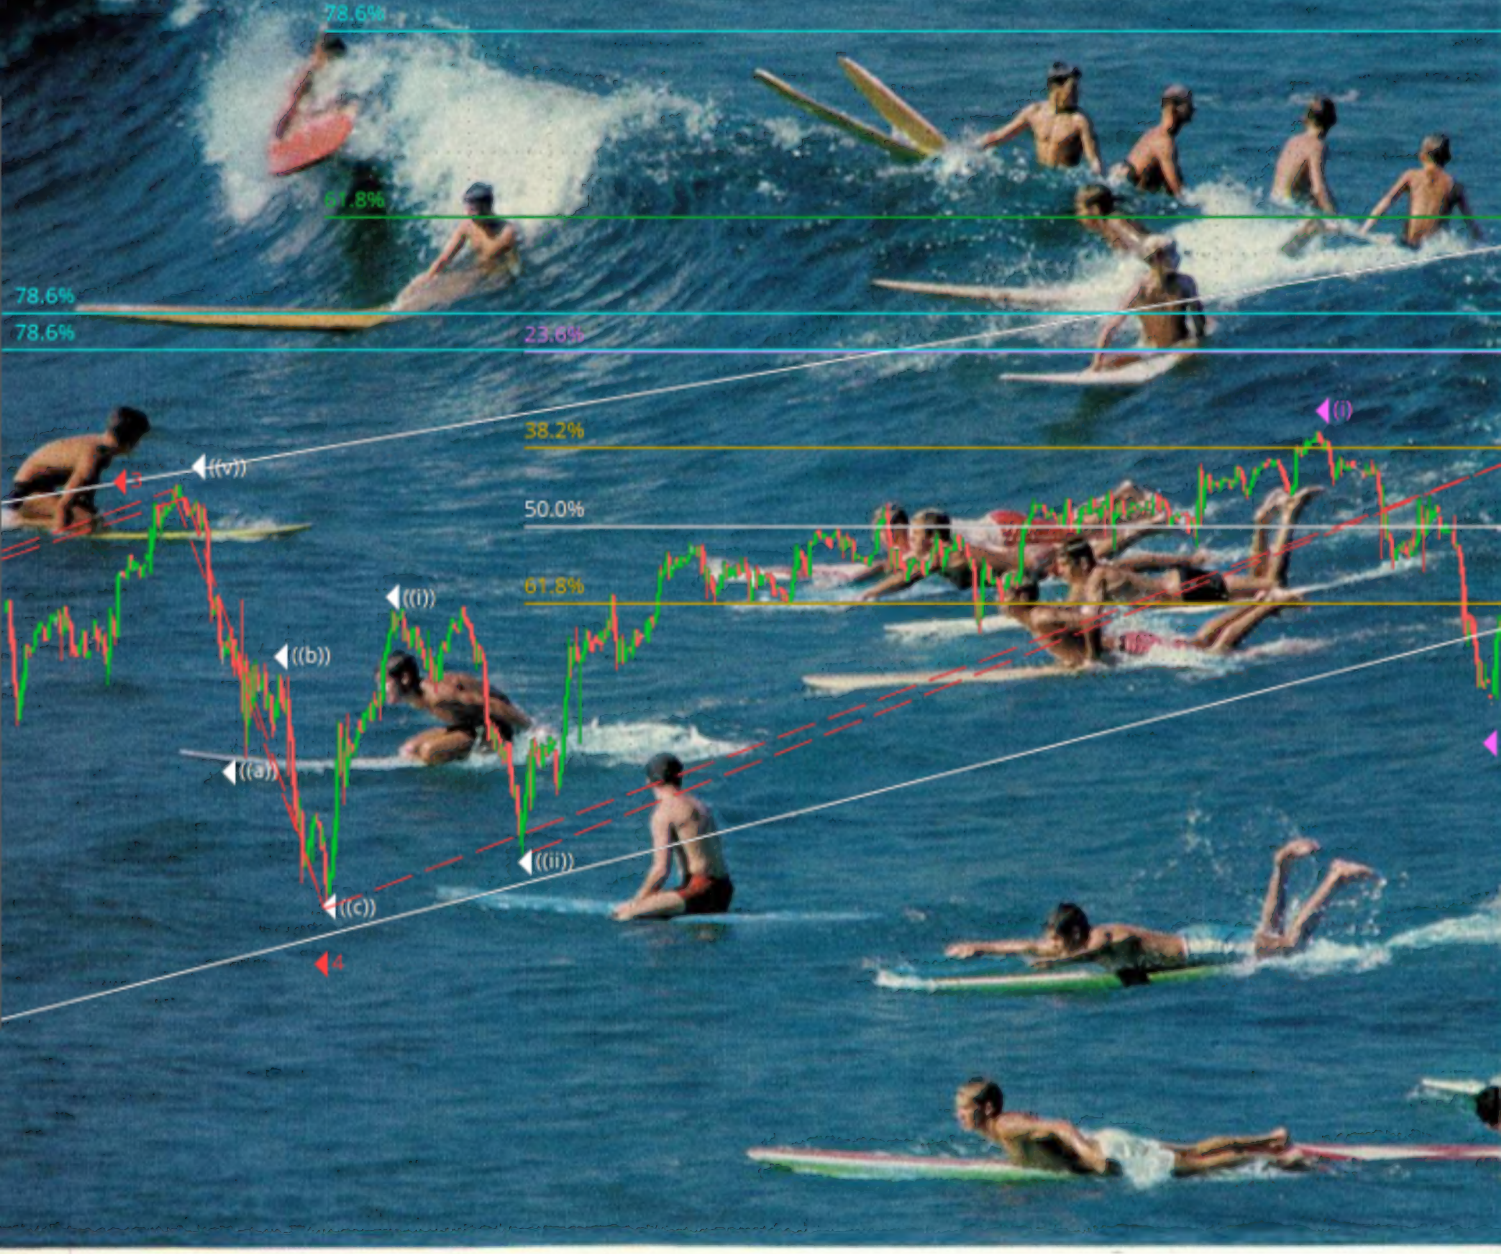
A Perspective: U/POSSIBLY6, Elliott Waves Guy



THE OCEAN CONTAINS an estimated 352 quintillion gallons of water. To put in perspective just how big that number is, there is a total of only 76 million shares of GameStop and it appears that apes own the entire float. The ocean, much like the current share price of GME, is fairly difficult to predict. However, by using Elliott Wave Theory, ape analysts continue to provide technical analysis utilizing modern tools and premium crayons.

Elliott Waves are not as simple as they seem. Ralph Nelson Elliott (1871-1948) was inspired by the Dow Theory and observations found in nature, concluding that the stock market could be predicted by observing and identifying repetitive patterns of waves. But the creator of the theory didn't understand that his Elliott Waves were intertwined with Fibonacci Ratios, which are also found in nature.

The wave principle is simply that the market moves in impulsive and corrective moves. The first five waves are part of the impulse, or motive, phase, while the last three waves are part of the of the corrective phase. These patterns can be seen in long term as well as short term charts.



Think of it like a relaxing day on the beach. In normal markets, there are impulsive and corrective periods. These impulsive periods can be compared to the waves breaking against the shore and the corrective periods as the water being pulled back to form an ever bigger wave.

Certain predictions can then be made using the Fibonacci Ratios. This table of ratios can then be used to predict when a wave will break on the shore based on the time of the wave before it being pulled back into the water, just like how a bigger move in the typical stock market can be predicted after downward movement.

However, GameStop is not the typical market. The corrective waves haven't been easy to identify, but the impulses are clear as day, unless of coarse the trader is blind. The Fibonacci is controlling the tides and apes are fortunate enough to have built on the work that was started 100 years ago in an effort at meaningful and accurate price discovery. The current price simply doesn't reflect the supply or the demand.

> "GME is the market addied out of its mind trying to make sense of its calculus exam 30 minutes before the test starts."

GameStop's waves are setting up for quite the tidal shift. Apes on their surfboards and in their canoes will soon feel their vessels being pulled back with the water. The tide is changing.

The era of anticipating the Elliott Wave tsunami is now coming to an end and the mother of all waves is about to come crashing down on the financial system. However, as hard as technical analysis apes can try to predict where GME will go, the only real target is up.

Breakers Make an Exciting Playground for HODLing Apes

Surfing over the top of the Elliott Waves captures the simian imagination in GME. Experienced apes avoid the towering concave wave that breaks too quickly but instead they HODL their shares with their diamond hands. Popularity for the stonk continues to rise as more apes join the movement.

An orangutan in swim trunks enjoys an afternoon of the beach after a long day of surfing over Elliott Waves.

The Wave is made of two phases. The Motive Phase is numbered 1 through 5 and the Corrective Phase is lettered A, B, and C.

II: SEA LEVELS RISE AS YELLEN FLOODS MARKETS WITH LIQUIDITY

An analysis by U/DISMAL-JELLYFISH, Inflation Guy

THE CAUSE of a tsunami is usually an earthquake or volcanic eruption which displaces a large volume of water, creating a large series of waves that can decimate shorelines. A tsunami of money has hit the economy and will soon destroy those living near the coastline.

Since February, U.S. Treasury Secretary Janet Yellen has drawn down $1.1 trillion from the Treasury General Account (TGA), flooding the market with a massive amount of liquidity only for it to get sucked out by repos on the other end. This displacement of capital is the equivalent of an underwater earthquake that has been drawing back the power of this wave for months and it is now headed for land.

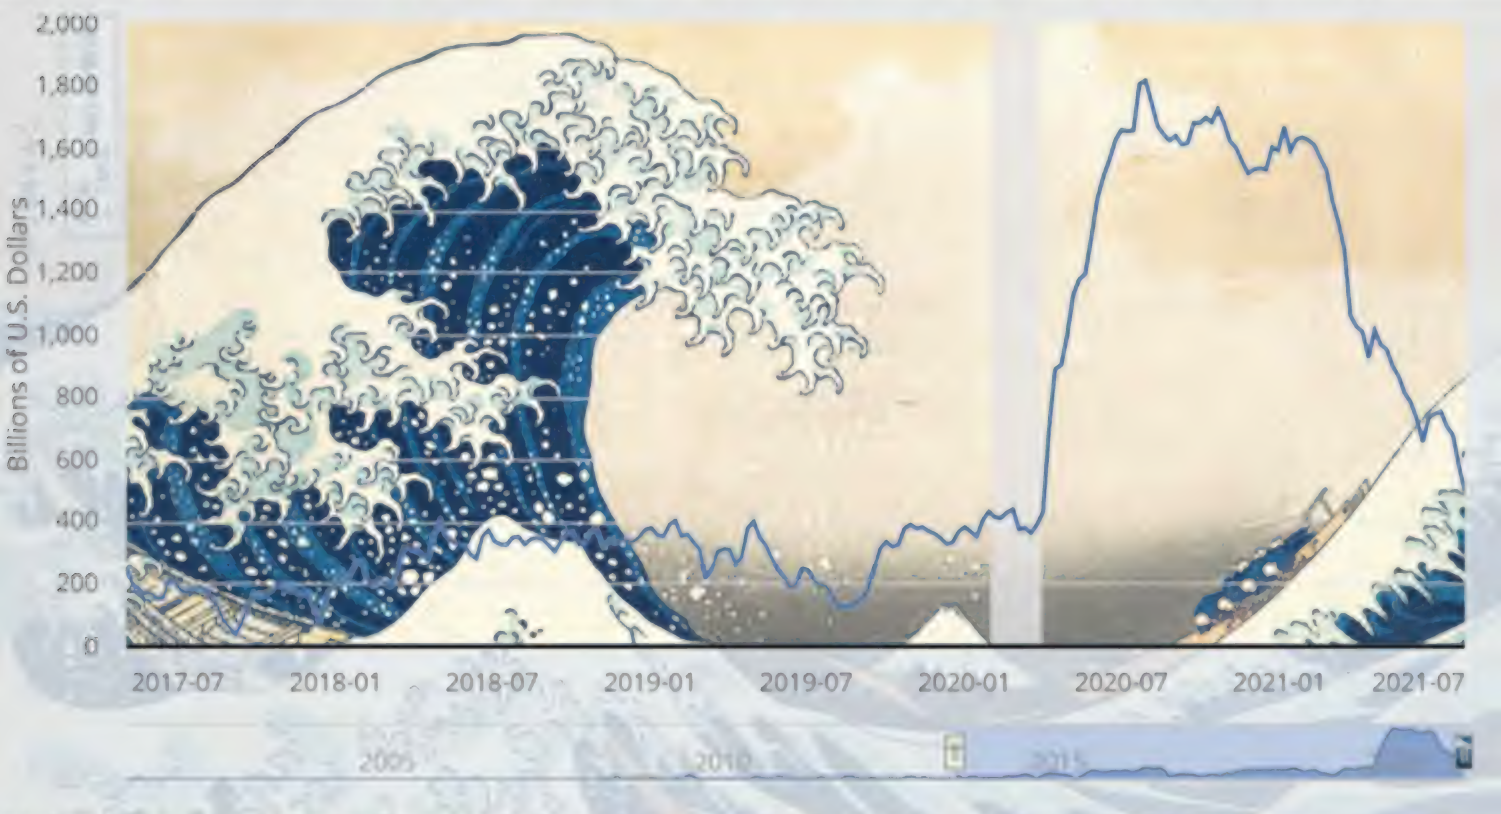
Yellen's Treasury is spending money as fast as the ocean waves gain their momentum and she didn't raise much in short-term Treasury bills which increases the power and magnitude of the incoming tsunami. The funding gap was only made up by hitting the checking account known as the TGA. The most recent balance sheets from the Fed show the TGA falling by tens of billions each week.

Yellen announced in January that the Treasury would draw down$1.6 trillion for the TGA at the time and another $500 billion by this summer. That flood of money has hit now.

The TGA money seems to have flowed to RRP, busting open is usage like dam under too much pressure. All while Fed Chair Jerome Powell keeps a steady stream of money coming each month with tens of billions of dollars going to asset purchases, mortgage-backed securities, and Treasury securities each month. These actions continuously inflate asset and consumer prices.

An inflation hurricane is forming over one ocean as a tsunami picks up strength in the other ocean, but it is all the same dollar. Either it's purchasing power continues to be destroyed or clogs the RRP drain, destroying the dam and kicking off MOASS.

A rogue wave is measured here alongside the U.S. Treasure General Account. The Great Wave off Kanagawa is a woodblock print by Japanese artist Hokusai and was included in his series Thirty-six Views of Mount Fuji. The incoming tsunami will be much larger.



III: APES STAY AFLOAT WHILE OWNING THE FLOAT

By U/UNIDENTIFIEDASSHOLE, Associate Editor

MOST APES do not like to swim. Their low body fat ratio causes them to sink and their top heavy body composition makes it difficult for them to keep their heads above the water. These apes may not be big on swimming, but they do go an occasional dip. In the case of GameStop, apes own the float and are staying above water with a boatload of shares.

Several years ago, chimpanzees in captivity were observed doing a kind of breaststroke, instead of the usual dog-paddle stroke that most terrestrial mammals do. These chimps were even seen diving!

Even orangutans have taken to the water, utilizing rowboats to move up and down rivers. It is a learned behavior from watching humans and now apes are watching Wall Street, learning about market structure and reading every filing.

These apes have learned to swim against the tides of tough hedge funds and they can do so because they are wearing GME life preservers. According to the latest survey results from u/Get-It-Got, apes own the float multiple times over so staying above water should be pretty easy as long as continued diamond hands are used.

GameStop has paid off their debt so there is no worrying about the company going under water and since the shorts have to close their positions at some point, apes just need to hodl and wait.

Until then, put on a pair of swim trunks and sit poolside while you wait for MOASS. Be sure to wear plenty of sunscreen and stay hydrated out there.

IV: CLEANING UP THE OCEAN: POST-MOASS PROJECT

By U/ZEDINSTEAD, Editor-in-Chief

THE OCEANS have been sorely neglected just like so many other parts of this earth that apes inhabit. It is one of those things that we take for granted due to its massive size but it is in dire need of attention from apes.

Each year, eight million metric tons of plastic is dumped in the oceans. By 2050, ocean plastic will outweigh all of the fish in the ocean. There are five massive garbage patches floating around the world and the largest – the Great Pacific Garbage Patch – covers an area twice the size of Texas.

And then there are the oil spills, the sewage, the chemical and agricultural runoff, air pollutants, microplastics and microfibers, maritime transportation, and even noise pollution are all taking their toll on the ocean.

These all add up to devastating effects on the environment. Warming ocean temperatures are causing coral bleaching. Toxic wastes are creating failures in the reproductive system for many marine animals. The food chains become contaminated and affect apes' health.

A massive ocean cleanup project needs to take place thirty years ago, but now is the second best time to get started. Do your part today and put a share of GameStop in the infinity pool for the ocean cleanup project.

Discarded trash in the oceans washes ashore at places like Turneffe Atoll in Belize (left). An orangutan is using a rowboat while hodling shares of GameStop with diamond hands (upper).

A DAILY DOSE OF ZEN IN A MARKET

Story and Photography by U/DAMONCORSO, Daily Zen Guy

THE PRACTICE of finding Zen is something that many enlightened apes have achieved and it is in that state of mind that apes have strengthened their diamond hands to hodl even harder. Retail investors are lied to by the very institutions they should be able to trust and suffer constant manipulation by the media, yet still apes find a way to move past the FUD and raise their floor. There are many ways to find this Zen and understanding how to get there is a powerful tool.

We all come from different parts of the jungle. Apes reside in all corners of the world, and it easy to forget how beautiful and awe-inspiring the world can be while staring at one-minute candles. There are apes hodling shares in the villages of Italy and on the islands of Hawaii. These places may seem far away but you can visit them every morning before the market opens through meditation.

Take a moment before the bell rings to breathe and mentally go to a place that brings you peace. You can start the day in a total state of Zen by spending a few minutes thinking about a beautiful place. But you can take it a step further by fully meditating.

Sit comfortably, close your eyes, and focus on your breathing without trying to control it. If your mind wanders, return your focus back to your breath and maintain this process for a few minutes. By doing this, apes can bring that banana power back into their daily life and find that next level of Zen.

Or better still, turn off your phone, totally

unplug, and physically become immersed. Fire up your soul and find a local hike or a waterfall to explore. Take a drive out to some small village in the countryside or dig your feet into the sand on the beach. Visit a historical location or find a mountain bike trail. Step away from the ticker and the FUD by distracting yourself with the world around you because it is the ultimate way to hodl.

The most important thing is to get away from the television and the text messages by appreciating the world around you. While you're out there, consider the impact you will have on this planet moving forward.

Eventually, the shorts must close their position. The DD shows that apes own the float and its obvious that apes have diamond hands so it is only a matter of waiting. While you wait for MOASS, locate that somewhere special and go there physically or mentally. FUD is non-existent to the Zen ape who emphasizes rigorous self-restraint, meditation-practice, and insight into the nature of mind and the world.

I will leave you with one of my favorite quotes from a naturalist hero:

> "I only went out for a walk, and finally concluded to stay out till sundown, for going out, I found, was really going in."
> -John Muir

FIGHTING BACK AGAINST THE VIKING TRIBES OF FUD AND SHILL

An adventure story by U/HALF-DANE

THE FIGHT rages on and for months now I had been observing and interacting with the Viking tribes of FUD and shill. These dangerous aggressors come flooding into the comment sections causing disorder and spreading fear, uncertainty, and doubt. There are different opinions about how to best fight back against the hordes but I promote an approach of benevolence.

First we must define and recognize the different tribes. Shills are people who are paid to spread FUD, while trolls are doing it for the lulz or internet fame. The commonality is that both will pretend they are inexperienced apes who are only asking innocent questions. Many of these questions are disguised tactics to forum slide or instill FUD, but there are times that new apes that actually are inexperienced get caught in the crossfire.

The offensive strategy has a high cost and the price apes are paying is an atmosphere of aggressive suppression of stupidity. It is why the malevolent actors are doing it in the first place, hiding in the masses to discharge their loaded questions and toxic comments. Many apes attempt to expose the hypocrisy, and the most talented of apes can show admirable results, but this aggression is detrimental to the very best aspect of being an ape: ape don't fight ape.

This is why I advocate for a different strategy in fighting the tribes of FUD.

- Apes should fight fears with resolve
- Fight uncertainty and doubt by explaining the DD as best as possible

Statistics show that most users on Reddit only lurk and never contribute, so even if helpful responses are offered to shills, then at least real apes might read it and grow wrinkles.

I have found that if you react as if everyone was acting good faith, it forces the shills to be aggressive first, and they unfailingly do, always. In that moment, I have won and they are exposed. Reported and move on – let the mods sort them out.

This style of engagement has brought me lots of ridicule from aggressors themselves, calling me a 'Disney Princess' as if being friendly was a bad thing. But I have weaponized my kindness. One after another they fall. I am become Disney Princess, destroyer of angry shills.

This Viking tribe of shills is just one of many hired by hedge funds to post misinformation across social media. Fear, Uncertainty, and Doubt, prepare for battle as another trading day gets underway. A troll is participating. Uncertainty is ready for the hype day.
